earf.world: what changes with r47-site-next

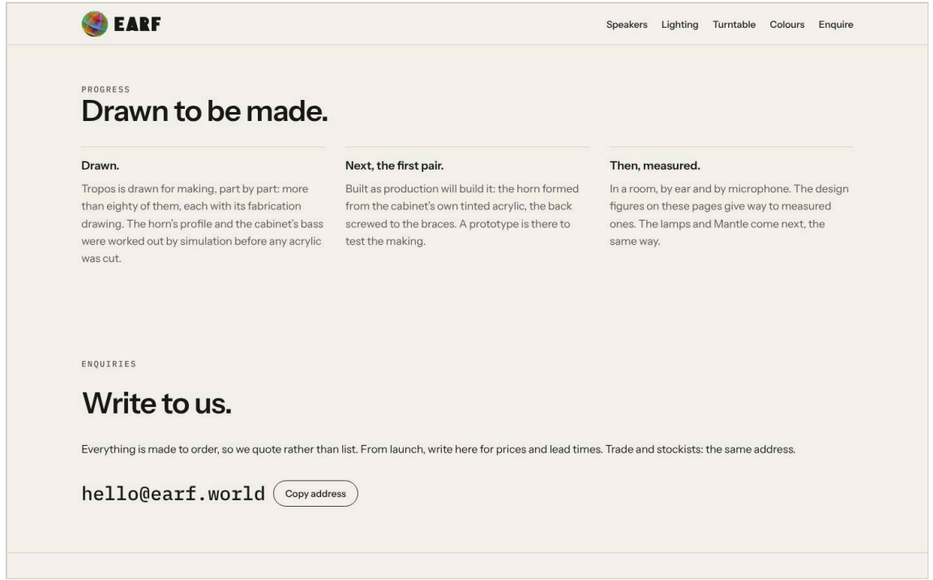

Before and after screenshots, 31 October 2026, for the owner's deploy decision: the branch as it would go live. Nothing here is live until the owner says yes.

Off and not shown: the waitlist form and its privacy page (waiting on a provider), the real-time 3D view (a blind critic judged it would hurt beside the renders), and the campaign slots (empty until the owner picks).

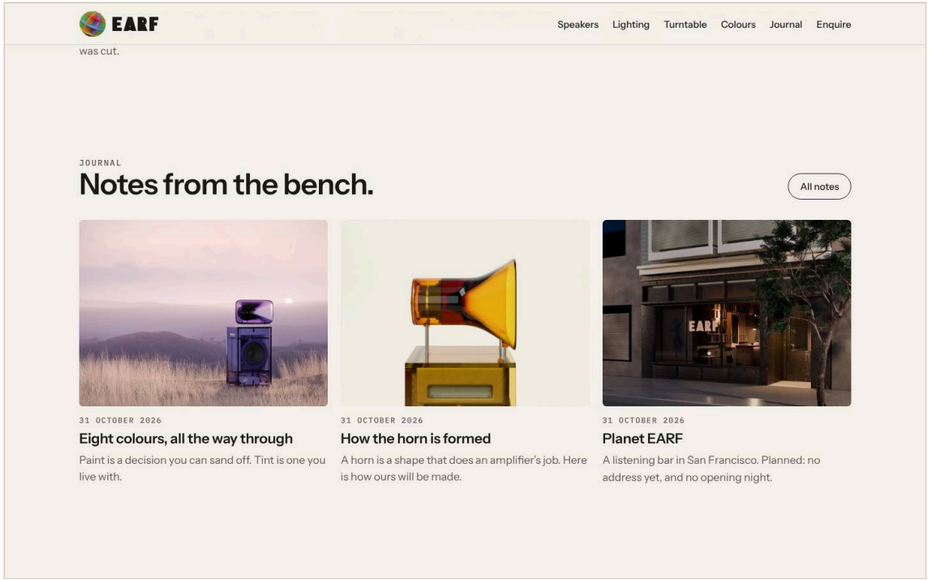

Checks on the branch: 63 routes at 1440 and 390 px, axe (WCAG 2.1 AA), no horizontal scroll, every link; the 44 preview pages land where they should; Lighthouse on home and Tropos level with the live site (home 73/97, Tropos 71/86, mobile/desktop).

Tropos: "Turn it" (Ember)

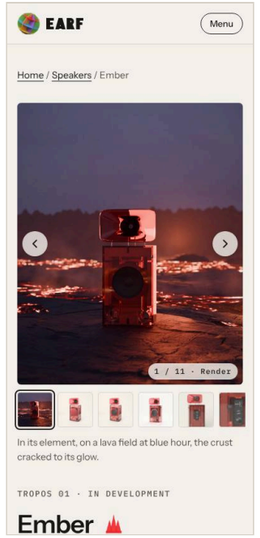

A path-traced, drag-to-turn view in each colour's gallery: the stills' own studio shot, about 46 degrees either side of face-on, in all eight colours. "Copy link" beside Enquire gives the page's own preview link.

Tropos: "Turn it" (Fog)

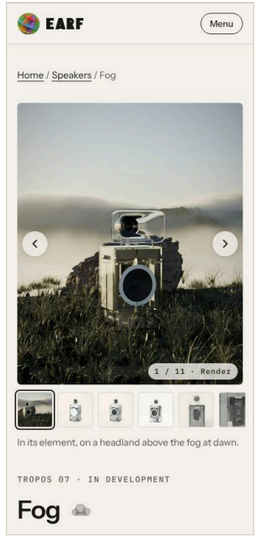

Fog's water-clear horn reads faint against the white studio ground. Left as is: the Fog still on the live site looks the same.

Link previews (new)

Each product in each colour, each colour, the press page and each post has its own preview card at /s/<address> (44 in all): its picture at 1200 x 630, its title and words, its colour as the theme, and schema.org data (a Product with no price, or an Article). Before, every link showed the same card. A few of them:
